Music continues to break out at the Portland Center Stage. Last season, new artistic director Chris Coleman brought the first musical to the company, and this season opens with a glorious production of the Jule StyneArthur LaurentsStephen Sondheim classic, Gypsy. One of the all-time classic show biz stories, Gypsy's set during the waning days of vaudeville in the 1920s and 1930s. Based on the memoirs of striptease legend Gypsy Rose Lee, the musical focuses on Gypsy's mother, Momma Rose, who pushes her daughters onto the stage to satisfy her own ambition. Great songs by Styne and Sondheim like "Rose's Turn," "Let Me Entertain You" and "If Momma Was Married" shed light on the tough life of the vaudeville circuit, and the 1,000plus light bulbs of Center Stage's set illuminate the intensity of the stage. The show is directed by theatrical phenom Bill Fennelly, who has been drawing much acclaim at the tender age of 28. Douglas Levin
